POINTS ON CAMPING OUT.
INFORMATION VALUABLE TO SPORTSMEN BY AN OLD HUNTER.

The Wrong and the Right Way to Choose a Campsite—Other Things as Important as Water—Improved Places of Shelter—How to Make a Fire.
To know how to choose the best possible site for a camp is one of the most important parts of a sportsman's education. There are many old time woodsmen and professional guides who are still lacking in this faculty, and I have seen civil engineers, geologists, and even learned men act like boys 10 years old when they attempted to choose a camping spot. Other than choose camp sites by what appears to be a haphazard way. They seem to know at a glance what is the best place to set up a tent of country and never have to think twice to decide where to locate. This faculty cannot be acquired by reading books. It is innate, like poetic genius, and yet there are certain general rules which may be given and that, if followed, will greatly aid the student of camp life.

Weather permitting, always pitch your camp on high ground. The top of a ridge is the best place to set up a tent. In a low place, select a level bench on the side of a hill. The inclination to camp near the water is always strong in every man's mind, and if the weather and the shape and nature of the ground are such as to warrant it, it is pleasant to lie awake at night and hear the brook bubble, the river roll or the waves wash on the pebbly beach, but frequently the ground is damp on the bank or river side, where the miasmatic vapors will arise, or there is a rank growth of weeds that give off noxious odors. If the time be summer the mosquitoes are likely to be much worse at the water's edge than further away, and, in either case, it is better to camp well up the hill, carry what water you must use and do without the aqueous miasma.

Again, if your camp be pitched on the bank of a western stream, you may go to bed at night dry as a bone, and wake up in the morning to find yourself and your whole outfit being carried down the valley on the bottom of a flood that has come from a cloud burst.

A party going into the woods and expecting to remain for several weeks in one place, especially in winter and winter, may find it necessary to build a log cabin. The limits of the present article will not admit of my going into a discussion of this subject.

As to temporary shelters other than cabins and tents, there are a great many styles known to woodsmen, many of which may be made decidedly comfortable, and with but little labor. If possible, a place of canvas or of light material should be provided, large enough to form a lean-to, the roof of a log, but where this is impossible, dirt, bark, rushes or flags may be used to good advantage.

A shelter of temporary shelter, capable of sheltering four men, may be made of three poles, eight feet long and about six inches in diameter. These are notched and built up in the form of an open square, the independent poles being held in place by four posts planted in the ground, and proper poles, and each pair held together at the top by ropes or withes. Other poles are then laid as close together as possible over the top, covered with a tarp, or with brush, grass, or other material.

If the weather be cold the cracks between the poles should be stopped with moss, grass or boughs, and by keeping a fire burning in front of the open end, and three or four feet away, a party may be comfortable in such a shelter with the mercury at zero.

A bush shelter, usually called a "lean-to," may be made by laying a pole in the forks of two posts, and by using a pole of height of five or six feet from the ground, leaning other poles from this to the ground at an angle of about 30 degrees, and covering the top with cedar or hemlock boughs or bark or by building up the sides of the lean-to properly described. If either side of the lean-to is put on properly it will shed a heavy rain. The ends may be inclosed with either boughs or bark.

A shelter of temporary shelter is made by leaning a pole, ten or twelve feet long, against a large green tree (or by placing the upper end in the fork of a small tree), and by resting the other end on the ground, and by leaning other poles from this to the ground, spreading them so as to make the lodge five or six feet wide at the front end, and tapering to a point at the rear. The fire may be built against the tree on which the pole leans, and care must be taken not to allow it to reach and burn away the ridge pole.

It really requires a good deal of mechanical skill to build a good camp fire. The way to make a cooking fire is to lay down a green pole, five or six inches thick, and two feet long, and on the top of that, with notches in the upper side about ten or twelve inches apart. These will be called the "dowels" or "fire iron." Now cut a more pole, six or eight inches thick and about four feet long, and lay it in the notches in your fire iron. Procure a large supply of dry wood of some kind, brush, split wood, bark or chips and lay them on the ground, midway between your fire iron and the dowels, so that they will extend the length of your fire iron and backlog, and the fire will soon spread to either end of these. The air will circulate under and through your fire, and your fire iron and backlog are just the right distance apart to set your camp kettle, frying pan and coffee pot.

If you are going to cook more than one meal in the place it will pay you to put up a crane. This is built as follows: Cut two green sticks, two inches thick and two feet long; drive them into the ground a foot from either end of your fire and split them to the top of each with the ax. Then cut another green pole, five or six feet long, and reach from one of these posts to the other, flatten the ends and insert them in the splits. The posts should be of such length that the pole will pass through the ball of the camp kettle to the bottom, swinging just clear of the fire. Now cut a hooked limb that will hang well on the pole, and in the shape of it cut a notch, in which you can insert the ball of the coffee pot, and in such a position that it will also hang near the fire.—G. O. Shields in New York World.

First Catch Your Dower.
A dower catch to hold the bride's trousseau is coming to be looked upon as the proper thing, the chest to be a carved and upholstered affair. The old longing for a dower to get the trousseau with is also continued.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Little John's Big Money.
Major Lemsey, who was registering the names of immigrants at Castle Garden, asked John Broderick, a diminutive little Irishman, if he had any money. John screwed his face into a knot and responded: "Oh have; plenty that to you?" John didn't look as though overburdened with wealth. He wore a green, ragged suit, and he looked as though water in any sense was unknown to him. But when the major insisted that he must know what money he had John drew a roll of greenbacks from his pocket as big as two fists. The major almost fell off his chair with astonishment. The roll contained $1,300. John said he was a weaver, bound for Boston. He was "lashed."—New York Herald.

As to Eating Cold Food.
Eat cold food slowly. Digestion will not begin till the temperature of the food has been raised by the heat of the stomach to 98 degrees. Hence the more heat that can be imparted to it by slow mastication the better. The precipitation of a large quantity of cold in the stomach by fast eating may, and often does, cause discomfort and indigestion, and every occasion of this kind results in a measurable injury to the digestive functions. For water drunk with cold food of course increases the mischief. Hot drinks—hot water, weak tea, coffee, chocolate, etc.—will, on the contrary, help to prevent it. But eat slowly, my way.—Leeds (Eng.) Mercury.

She Had Burns' Works.
A gentlemanly book agent who canvasses the territory adjacent to Chicago recently spent a day out in the fashionable quarter of Hyde park with an expensive edition of Burns' works. He made several sales and finally called at a house where he was met by an elaborately dressed lady who appeared interested. "Whose works, madam," replied the gentleman, "the one I am here to show you." "The one I am here to show you," interposed the lady, "which of his works they are. We have some already. Are they the ones which are his poems?" The agent fled.—Chicago Herald.

The Olive Tree.
The height of an olive tree is usually twenty feet. It is sometimes as high as fifty feet, and it branches almost fabulously. One recently destroyed at Beaulieu had a recorded age of five centuries, and it was thirty-six feet in circumference. The tree was exceedingly prolific under cultivation. It yielded an average of 70 per cent. of its weight, exclusive of seed, in oil. Italy is said to produce $3,000,000 and France 7,000,000 gallons of oil annually. The tree does not vegetate readily beyond its native altitude of 45 degrees latitude.—Exchange.

Drunkennes—Liquor Habit—IN ALL THE WORLD THERE IS BUT ONE CURE, DR. HAINES' GOLDEN SPECIFIC.
It can be given in a cup of tea or coffee without the knowledge of the patient taking it, effecting a speedy and permanent cure whether the patient is a moderate drinker or an alcoholic wreck. Thousands of drunkards have been cured who have taken the Golden Specific in their coffee, without their knowledge, and to-day believe they quit drinking of their own free will. No harmful results from its administration. Cures taken for circular and full particulars. Address in confidence, J. H. Haines, Specific Co., 185 Race Street, Cincinnati, O.

Wanted Women.
The more sensitive nature of the female sex renders women much more susceptible than men to those numerous ills which spring from lack of harmony in the system. Nervousness, sick headache and other ailments peculiar to women cause great suffering. Hood's Sarsaparilla is admirably adapted for such cases. It gives greater vitality, strength and digestive strength, cures headache, indigestion, and creates an appetite.

"For nine years I was in a state of constant suffering, scarcely able at any time to walk about the house, and part of the time unable to be out of bed. By advice of local physicians I went to Philadelphia for treatment, which gave me relief for a time, but I was getting well, I began to get up hope of ever getting well. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and its good effect was soon apparent. I began to improve in health, and continued taking the medicine till now I feel perfectly well, and can walk six or seven miles a day without feeling tired. I think Hood's Sarsaparilla is just the medicine for women and anyone who has had it." JENNIE M. SKIRN, East Broad St., Penn.

"I must say Hood's Sarsaparilla is the best medicine I ever used. Last spring I had no appetite, and the least work I did fatigued me over so much I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, and soon I felt as if I could do as much in a day as I had formerly done in a week. My appetite is voracious." MRS. M. V. BAYARD, Atlantic City, N. J.

"My daughter had an abscess on her neck for five or six years, being all the time under the care of physicians, without any perceptible relief. Hood's Sarsaparilla was then recommended to me for her, and it has entirely cured her." S. TUCKERSON, Hazelwood, Penn.

"I highly recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla as the best remedy for sick headache. I have been selling this medicine 6 years and not a bottle proved unsatisfactory." F. J. FAIRC, Frick's, Bucks Co., Penn.
